From the Mitchell Family

After two very difficult winters, we know that the mild temperatures of the past few months were a welcome change to the communities that we serve. As we talk to our customers about planning for the seasons ahead, we often receive questions on how to reduce energy expenses. Warm weather like this past winter always helps, but we can't rely on Mother Nature alone. Year-after-year, energy efficiency, annual maintenance and price protection are the three most powerful tools available to control household heating expenses.

Energy Efficiency upgrades like investing in an oil or propane System 2000 Boiler, installing a high-efficiency American Standard Air Conditioning system, or considering a Rinnai Hot Water Heater for your hot water needs can make a real difference in your annual energy consumption.

Annual Maintenance performed on your boiler, furnace, air conditioning, pool heater, gas logs and other appliances has proven to increase efficiency, reduce service calls, and save you money on potential costly repairs.

Heating Oil and Propane Price Protection Plans can give you the peace of mind of knowing what your cost of fuel will be for the coming year, and current prices are still near their lowest levels in over 10 years. Remember, price protection is not always about getting the lowest price, but it is a powerful tool that helps you control and budget your heating expenses by providing you certainty.

We provide information on some of these cost saving tools in this edition of the Mitchell Times, but please feel free to call or email us with any questions you have. Thank you for your loyalty and your friendship. - The Mitchell Family

A Smart Investment for Your Comfort

The best strategy for lowering your heating costs is to install more efficient equipment that can reduce your energy consumption. For years, we have put our trust in System 2000, the world's leader in oil and propane heat and hot water technology. The Energy Kinetics System 2000 is a high-efficiency, ENERGY STAR® rated, heating system that can save you 30-40% on your heating costs this year – and every year after. Their exclusive "Energy Recovery" design makes it one of the most efficient heat and hot water systems available. The System 2000 is an easy upgrade for existing warm air, radiant "in floor," and traditional baseboard heating systems. System 2000 has helped hundreds of our valued customers drastically reduce their usage and save substantial money!
